

Far from the mad Russian crowd

Kevin Lee

If Communism tickles you, and fills y'r mouth with laughter,
Then, with Lenin they might pickle you, the Socialist here-after.
In fifty years they'll file past, to gander at y'r mummy;
(It's cheaper than a circus, -50 cents to see a dummy).

It's astounding! It's the answer...to the world's ills and woes!
They'll turn paper-bags and cartons, into fifty dollar notes.
Oh, it's true! We'll drown in Kopeks, we shall fear no drought or dread;
They'll turn rivers into butter, they'll turn boulders into bread.

They shout it out, they spout it out, they crow it loud and long;
In their land of wine and roses, we'll buy Daimlers for a song!
Yes, life will be so good there, we won't want to go to Heaven,
So we'll never need to die there, in their golden never-never.

And now they present...DAH! DAH!-the world as they'd like it...
The top brass will be chauffeured in, the rest can bike or hike it.
Their speeches are a gourmet feast,-they're really sweet and flavoury,
Oh, in the mouth they're honey-in the belly they're unsavoury.
So that's it folks, the choice is yours...top marx to those who buy it,
But as for me, it's time to go; they've sent the Black Maria!

END

Communism promised the world a utopia, with slogans such as: 'From each according to his ability, to each according to his needs.' But absolute power corrupts absolutely, and every Communist country has become a banana republic, with a small elite Government living in luxury at the top of the pile, and the majority living in slavery and poverty at the bottom. There will be no utopia on earth until the 'kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our God and of His Christ,' and the rulership of this world is freed from human greed and selfishness.
